GARY'S CORNER

Before You Know Kindness by Chris Bohjalian. (This book is in process and will soon be in our Legal Fiction collection on the basement level.)

~Reviewed by Gary Kemp, Continuations Assistant.

Three generations of the Seaton family have gathered at their summer home in New Hampshire for a season of swimming, tennis and badminton. Unfortunately, two events collide. John Seaton has a jammed deer rifle put away in the trunk of his car and his thirteen year-old niece, Charlotte McCullough, desperately wants to be a grown-up. To make matters worse, Spencer McCullough, Charlotte's father, is a member of a fanatic animal rights group, FERAL. This book is a tragedy full of secrets. John keeps secret his desire to hunt deer that are devouring the family's summer garden, something that Spencer would never countenance. Spencer's wife, Catherine, is bored with her marriage and alleviates this by flirting with younger men on the tennis court and hides other carnivorous needs by keeping slim jims in her purse. Charlotte and her cousin, Willow (John and Sara's daughter), keep secret their use of pot and beer on the night of the accident.

When Spencer is accidentally shot by Charlotte with the aforementioned jammed rifle she claims to be aiming at a deer, her motivations are never really clear. FERAL decides to initiate a lawsuit against the gun manufacture, even though it becomes clear that there is nothing wrong with the gun. As all the secrets come spilling out, it becomes clear that the central theme is that of a family in crisis.

Chris Bohjalian's novel is a book of superb and complicated characterizations. Each one crafted down to precise action and vocabulary from Seaton Matriarch, Nan, down to the myopic and sometimes venal lawyers at FERAL. All in all, it is a story of relationships and family brilliantly viewed through the microscope of crisis.

- Backup your data frequently. We recommend using USB Flash Drives.
- The university is currently experiencing Wireless problems. The fastest, most reliable access points are in the basement (Lib-Bst-AP-1, Lib-Bst-AP-2, Lib-Bst-AP-3). Please see a lab assistant if you continue having trouble connecting to the wireless network.
- Ensure your virus protection software's virus definitions have not expired and are up to date. It is imperative that you have active and current virus protection.
