The San Francisco Zoo wanted to replace the tiger that was killed in an unfortunate incident a year ago. It arranged with the National Zoological Society to prepare a study recommending an appropriate male sperm donor for the female cat given the genetic history of all zoo tigers in the nation. The NZS selected Rajah as the appropriate donor and sent a representative to the Cincinnati zoo to obtain the specimen and ship it to San Francisco. Unfortunately, Rajah's specimen thawed in transit when the flight was unexpectedly delayed; it was of no use when it arrived at the San Francisco Zoo. The zoo has decided not to impregnate its female tiger after all and wants its $5,000 fee returned by the NZS. Advise the San Francisco Zoo. If the zoo had consulted you earlier, what advice would you have given?

Essay Question II:

Connie went to a party at a friend's house. Only when she arrived did she discover that different kinds of cosmetics would be demonstrated and available for sale. Connie had a complimentary facial and manicure. Feeling a little guilty, she decided to place a small order to please her hostess who was probably getting a commission on the sales. So Connie asked for a night crème, a skin firming neck crème, an eye crème to reduce puffiness and dark circles, and iridescent orange nail polish. She never asked the price. Yesterday her friend dropped off the products together with a bill for $620. Connie has never before bought any cosmetics for more than $20 at Longs. When Connie expressed her surprise at the price, her friend replied sternly "all sales are final – no returns". Advise Connie.
